

Little Girl

37 You're all... real?! Oh wow! This is like... a dream come true!

39 Of course! I love fairy tales. I've read all of your stories. Cinderella... Sleeping Beauty... Puss in Boots... Rapunzel! But... why are you all here?

44 Wow! That sounds great. But... is it working? Are more people reading your stories?

46 Well, I like all the new things you're doing. (pause) But I also love your old stories, too.

49 Yes! Maybe you could make a brand-new story together, mixing the old and the new! Then, you could post it online!

54 I can't believe it! I'm actually helping the fairy tale characters write a new story!

55 Once upon a time, in a forest unlike any other, where even the air seems to hum with secrets, we find our heroine, Belle. She's no stranger to magic, but tonight, something is different. Very different! She has been pulled here, by a breeze that whispers tales and mysteries to those who dare to listen.

Narrator

- 58 Now, what's an enchanted forest without a few familiar faces? It's Hansel and Gretel, but things are a bit different. Hansel... HMMMMM! He's not quite the brother he was.
- 60 Aaahh, Red Riding Hood! More than just a girl with a red cloak. She is brave, fearless and now very good at avoiding trouble in the forest. She travels far to deliver her grandmother's famous wild berry jam.
- 80 The forest is busy today. Here, we have Cinderella, who once ran from a ball, but now runs for herself. And there's Rapunzel, but without her famous hair for others to climb. She is now the climber, testing her strength in new ways.
- 93 Poor Prince Charming, confused by these modern women. But this forest has a knack for change. Enter Puss in Boots. Clever, charming, and quick with a scheme.
- 111 Sleeping Beauty, once at peace in her sleep, now roams awake, promoting her own fashion line.
- 120 As the heroes and heroines arrive, it becomes clear that this enchanted forest has brought them together. Each feels the whisper of magic, a pull toward something bigger than themselves.
- 126 The heroes find themselves in a storm unlike any they've seen. A wind with a mind of its own.
- 159 As they stand before the towering cliff, the heroes realize the climb will demand courage and trust in one another.
- 189 With the storm growing, the heroes understand that magic alone won't stop it. Their friendship and courage becomes their shield. They must each reach deep within, for it's the light they hold inside that will clear the storm.
- 202 The heroes overcome the darkness together. Their purpose, their courage, and their friendship have made a force more powerful than any storm.
